Greg Toner, CPA, CA, TEP, CLU

Are you considering starting your practice but overwhelmed with everything that's involved?

After working alongside veterinarians starting their own practice, I promise you that it is worth it. Being prepared for some common issues will help you address them.

In this session we will cover the following topics

- Issues to watch for when you start your practice and how to overcome them
  - Not having a banker who understands veterinary practices
  - Not having staff you can rely on
  - Not knowing how much you can afford to spend (and being afraid to spend money)
  - Not knowing how much money you are spending
  - Not tracking what you've spent compared to what you can afford to spend
  - Not reflecting on what you're doing, what's working, what needs to be tweaked, and what needs to stop.
  - Losing focus of why you're doing this.

- What makes this all worthwhile - A few stories
